Just Between

-By Bobby Westbrook

Count your blessings, I said, but in the rush of affairs it's not so easy. Of course, you could count yourself lucky if you didn't have the problem of one high school mother last night. She called up after reading the instructions-report to your child's home room and follow his daily schedule

Her question was "Which child?" Seems they have three in high school. We finally decided that either they'd have to take them alphabetically or draw lots and then take another child the next year. The only trouble with that was that by next year, they'll have four in high school.

Well, outside of "Back to School Night", they can count double my also conduct a hymn sing. blessings and it's going to be an exciting couple of years, I can the benefit of the church furnace see that right now.

Speaking of double blessings, Rev. John Bollier had double helpings last night - a supper with the Married Couples Class and dinner with the Organists Guild. That might not be an unmixed blessing, I suppose.

But the biggest blessing today seems to be that there's no more room here, so I don't have to think up anymore.
